

Friday, 25th September
7 - 9pm

St. Catharine's Church,
Gloucester
(London Rd, GL2 0RR)

Cost: by donation

Register in advance:
info@gtsstheology.org

Gateway Forum Presents:

Is the Bible Patriarchal?

The Bible has sometimes been criticised as a document written by men for men, where women are presented through male narrators and lawmakers, and where God is seen in male terms. If this has a divine stamp of approval where does it leave women? This talk will pick through some of the issues behind this position, but will argue that it misunderstands the nature of biblical literature, and the God it discloses.

DON'T MISS THIS OPPORTUNITY!

Come and discover for yourself whether the modern critique of the Bible as a patriarchal book reflecting outdated social norms holds merit, or whether there's another way of interpreting the biblical literature from an altogether different perspective.

Elaine Storkey

Elaine is an award-winning author and highly-regarded speaker, academic, theologian, and biblical scholar. She has lectured around the world and written on a broad range of topics, perhaps best known for her work in Christian feminism and perspectives on gender in the Bible, as well her global advocacy opposing violence against women.